Where They Play To-Day.

Browns at Cleveland; Boston at Washington; Detroit at Chicago.

Yesterday's Results.

Cleveland, 3; Browns, 1. Detroit, 4; Chicago, 9.

Again did the Browns taste the sorrow of defeat at the hands of the Cleveland "Blues" at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon. The score was 3 to 1 in favor of Lajoie's flock of sluggers.

There is not much news in the fact that the Browns were beaten. But the fans gained much comfort and solace from the fact that the Browns got walked in a new way. Usually they are outbitten by their opponents, and for that reason lose. The Browns slammed out ten hits off Rhoades as against seven made off Harry Howell by the hard-hitting visitors.

The fact proved how uncertain a game baseball is. Very few persons thought they would ever live long enough to see the Browns outbitten a rival team and then get beat. But one can expect anything from the local Americans.

Some fans, including Robert Lee Hedrick, are rash enough to expect them to win a game some day. And they may. Washington offers an illustration of what perseverance will accomplish even in baseball.

Howell, who twirled for the locals, pitched a high-class article of baseball. He allowed Lajoie's men only seven hits, walked two and fanned four. Still he lost.

BROWNS PLAYED LISTLESSLY.

The defeat of the Browns can be charged to their general indifference. "Dusty" Rhoades, a Cardinal cast-off, pitched against McAlister's men and while his pitching could not be classed as gilt edge it was good enough to beat the Browns.

Among the redeeming features of the locals, playing was the hitting of Jesse Burkett. He found Rhoades' pitching, his entire liking and slammed out four hits. Burkett sent the ball into safe territory in the first, second, fifth and eighth innings.

Flick was the Cleveland's bravest pupil with the willow. Elmer beat two of Howell's curves out of shape for two baggers and knocked another dizzy for a single.

Charles Hickman had the honor of making two of the longest fouls ever pitched in the history of the game. He pitched a "Hick" pelted it against the corner of the pavilion and that part of Hickman's property will require the services of a wood surgeon before it will be presentable.

FAN SLEPT SOUNDLY.

The sleeping fan was out again, and enjoyed a good rest. Not once during the game did the local fans stir up enough enthusiasm among the popular throng to ignore the Browns by slumbering while they play.

Mr. Hedrick's double play, which even by sending him a bill for a week's lodging. The rest of the fans were as interested in the game as the players.

Cleveland wasted very little time in sparing. They got busy with St. Louis right in the first inning. The Blues' long drive to Burkett gave to the Blues a tally in the opening.

A base on balls to Hay, coupled with Abbott's infield play and Hill's error, netted the Blues their second tally of the day in the second inning.

Hickman's single and Bemis's double walk to the Blues their third and last run in the fourth inning.

Hempfling's single, free passes to Huelman and Rhoades, and a walk to Dick Padden forced a run over the plate for St. Louis in the fifth inning.

St. Louis could do nothing in the fourth. A single by Smoot was not enough to help the Cubs. Chance drew a base; Casey sacrificed; Chance went out to Farrell to Beckley; Sagie stole third, and the Cubs were on base.

The Cubs could not score again until the eighth, when a two-bagger by Sagie allowed him to reach third on a single by Chance, and he was brought home by Jones' single. The Cubs scored seven runs in the eighth, and their two scores looked very insignificant a couple of the nine earned runs for St. Louis.

Mr. Brown essayed to pitch for the Cubs, but he didn't last long. At the end of two innings three two-baggers and a single had netted the visitors five runs, and Lundgren was substituted. But the St. Louis boys proceeded to go after Lundgren from the jump.

Brain, the first man up, singled; Barclay got to first; Burke went out to Chance; Grady got his base on balls; O'Neill got a three-bagger to right, clearing the bases; Farrell fielded out to Sagie; Shannon walked, but got caught trying for second, and the result was that three runs had been made off Lundgren.

Chicago scored two in the first. Sagie drew a base; Casey sacrificed; Chance went out to Farrell to Beckley; Sagie stole third, and the Cubs were on base.
